This interprofessional course exposes students to the stages of group development, cohesion, therapeutic factors, leadership skills, social roles, and ethical issues. Participants will be able to:

- Understand the theory of group development using a variety of models.
- Apply knowledge through experiential learning and developing group formulations.
- Introduce and understand the research evaluation components of group practice.

Have a team you want trained?

Contact us for details

Student Testimonials

“I learned so much from the other group participants”

“I am so glad I took this course!”

“Loved the real-life examples!”

INSTRUCTORS
Linda Cox, MSW, RSW, Chair, Group Studies Area, Assistant Professor (PT), Dept. of Psychiatry and Behavioural Neurosciences, McMaster University
Deirdre Querney, MSW, RSW, CPGC, City of Hamilton, Alcohol Drug & Gambling Services.
Laura Sergeant, MSW, RSW, Assistant Professor (PT), Dept of Psychiatry and Behavioural Neurosciences, McMaster University
Adrienne Sloan, RN, BSN, Mental Health Counsellor, Hamilton Family Health Team

McMaster University, Health Sciences Centre
Room 1J7