

Unintended Consequences

Sometimes medications end up in unusual places...

Like Trail Mix Parties (Also called: Pharm Parties, Cabinet Parties)

McMaster
University

 Michael G. DeGroote
NATIONAL PAIN CENTRE

nationalpaincentre.mcmaster.ca

Canadian Pain
Coalition

www.canadianpaincoalition.ca

Trail Mix parties occur when teenagers take their own, or their family's prescription and non-prescription medicines from the family medicine cabinet and bring them to a get-together. At the party, they mix all of the pills into a bowl and then take a handful to consume in order to get high. This practice is sending kids to emergency rooms suffering from deadly combinations of prescription medicine and alcohol.

What can you do? Remember:

- Medications do have risks when not used as prescribed for a particular person. Do not share your prescriptions with others or change your prescription in any way.
- Many kids believe prescription drugs are less dangerous because they are "prescribed by a doctor".
- Have a conversation with your family about the dangers of taking medications not prescribed for them.
- Talk to your doctor or pharmacist about how you can effectively communicate the risks of medication misuse.
- Keep a descending count on the bottle each time you take a dose. (Provides exact count of remaining supply).
- Secure all medications in your home, preferably in a locked cabinet or container. Lock boxes are available at your local pharmacy.
- Return any unused or old prescriptions to your pharmacy for disposal.